Allowing What is There to be There. As A.H. Almaas writes in Diamond Heart Book Two, "The personality cannot accept. It can surrender to the truth of the moment -- which is the same as the stopping of rejection -- surrender and allow what is there to be there without preference and judgment.”

For those in the U.S. who are looking for something to do besides watching election coverage, consider exploring your ideas about acceptance. Among the feelings of uncertainty, anxiety, and conflict, there are opportunities to better understand one’s beliefs, attitudes, and ego structures related to resistance, rejection, openness and acceptance. What supports you in being with what is and what’s unfolding?
Upcoming Online Events & New Group Forming

The Diamond Approach Online program is hosting two more introductory teachings for those new to the path and who are interested in getting a taste of the teaching. These teachings are meant for those who resonate with the Diamond Approach and want to learn more about this spiritual path. Introductory teachings are the first step in formulating a new teaching group within the Ridhwan school. Learn more about the new online group and the introductory teachings below.
