The Way of Diamond Inquiry™

"The Diamond Approach is an open and open-ended inquiry into the various elements of our experience and its patterns. When that diamond inquiry is sincere and intelligent, it is bound to encounter the aforementioned inner barriers against the free unfoldment of the soul. Challenging such barriers by questioning them leads to the insightful and directly felt comprehension of these barriers. In this way, diamond inquiry and understanding penetrate the barriers and open up our soul to the still-unknown possibilities sleeping in its depths."

-A.H. Almaas, founder of the Diamond Approach

In a world that is full of distractions and noise, meditating helps us settle into the depth of our being. But meditating isn’t useful when we must dance with the hustle and bustle of life—unless we interweave it with a practice that reveals our conditioning and hones our understanding of our day-to-day lives.

In the Diamond Approach, Diamond Inquiry is such a practice, using our innate capacity for discernment and discriminating intelligence and bringing them to bear on our direct, lived experience.

Meet the Teacher: Sarala Jungclaussen

"The DA offers many perspectives, which is really the totality. In being so open, it invites us, gives us a container for also looking at our drives, our instincts. Usually with what we see in the world, there are two ways we relate to it: we identify with it, which means we act it out, or we repress it, which basically means it just leaks out. And at different times we do different things. The Diamond Approach is a corrective for that, in helping us see, inviting us to be with our experience and to deepen our understanding more, and bringing us closer to ourselves, beyond outdated images, into more aliveness and truth."

Secret Treasure of Loving-Kindness

Teachers: Karen Johnson and Zarina Maiwandi

Our biggest hurdle to understanding the mysteries of the heart is our pain. But avoiding pain cuts off our compassion, which is the only quality that can actually transform it. Join us for the final weekend in the Lightness of Being series as we explore the green latifa and come to appreciate our pain for the portal that it is.
